

LIFE AFTER APPS

Episode 3

The Key Joe Gave to Every Door

One old password. Too many doors.

Panic says all doors.

Risk says these five first.

Compromised credential confirmed.

- Reused password
- Recent breach
- Saved accounts
- Old sessions

Rude, but helpful.

How bad is it?

Already inactive

Bad enough to move. Not bad enough to panic professionally.

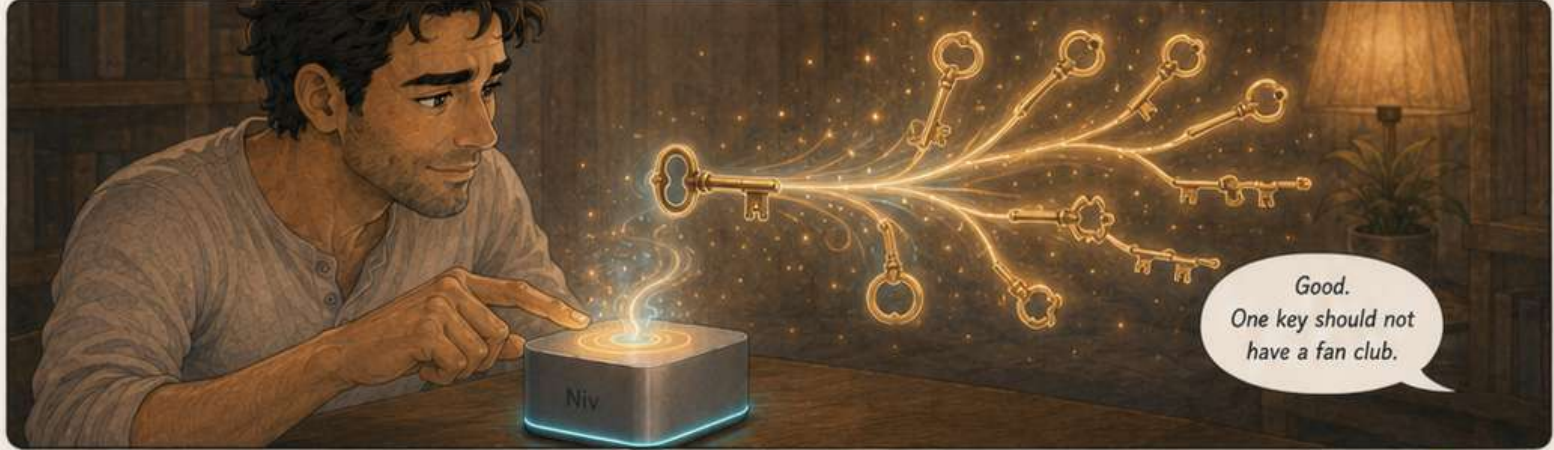

Emergency cleanup?

- Secure priority accounts first
- Queue sensitive actions for review
- Save new passwords

I can start the safe parts.

Start.

Good. One key should not have a fan club.

Night cleanup running

Do I want to know?

Mostly.

You did all that?

Secured overnight

- 42 passwords changed
- 18 old sessions signed out
- 9 stronger logins enabled
- 11 dead accounts closed
- 7 need your review

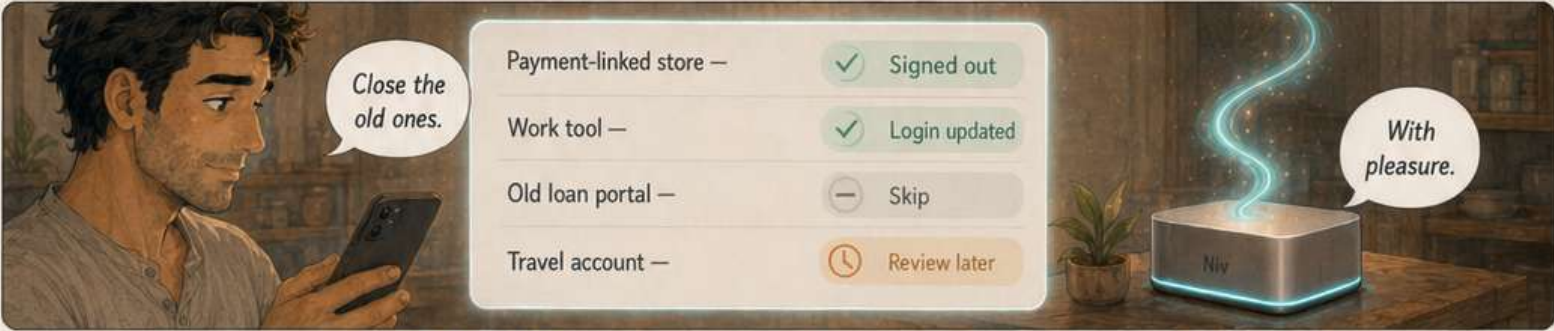

The internet was awake. I answered back.

Fair.

- Shopping cart icon: Payment-linked store – confirm sign out?
- Briefcase icon: Work tool – update login?
- Bank icon: Old loan portal – close account?
- Plane icon: Travel account – keep?

These need a human.

Close the old ones.

Payment-linked store –	✓ Signed out
Work tool –	✓ Login updated
Old loan portal –	– Skip
Travel account –	🕒 Review later

With pleasure.

I really used one password for all this?

Bowl – done
Gift – hidden
Passwords – never again

You believed in consistency.

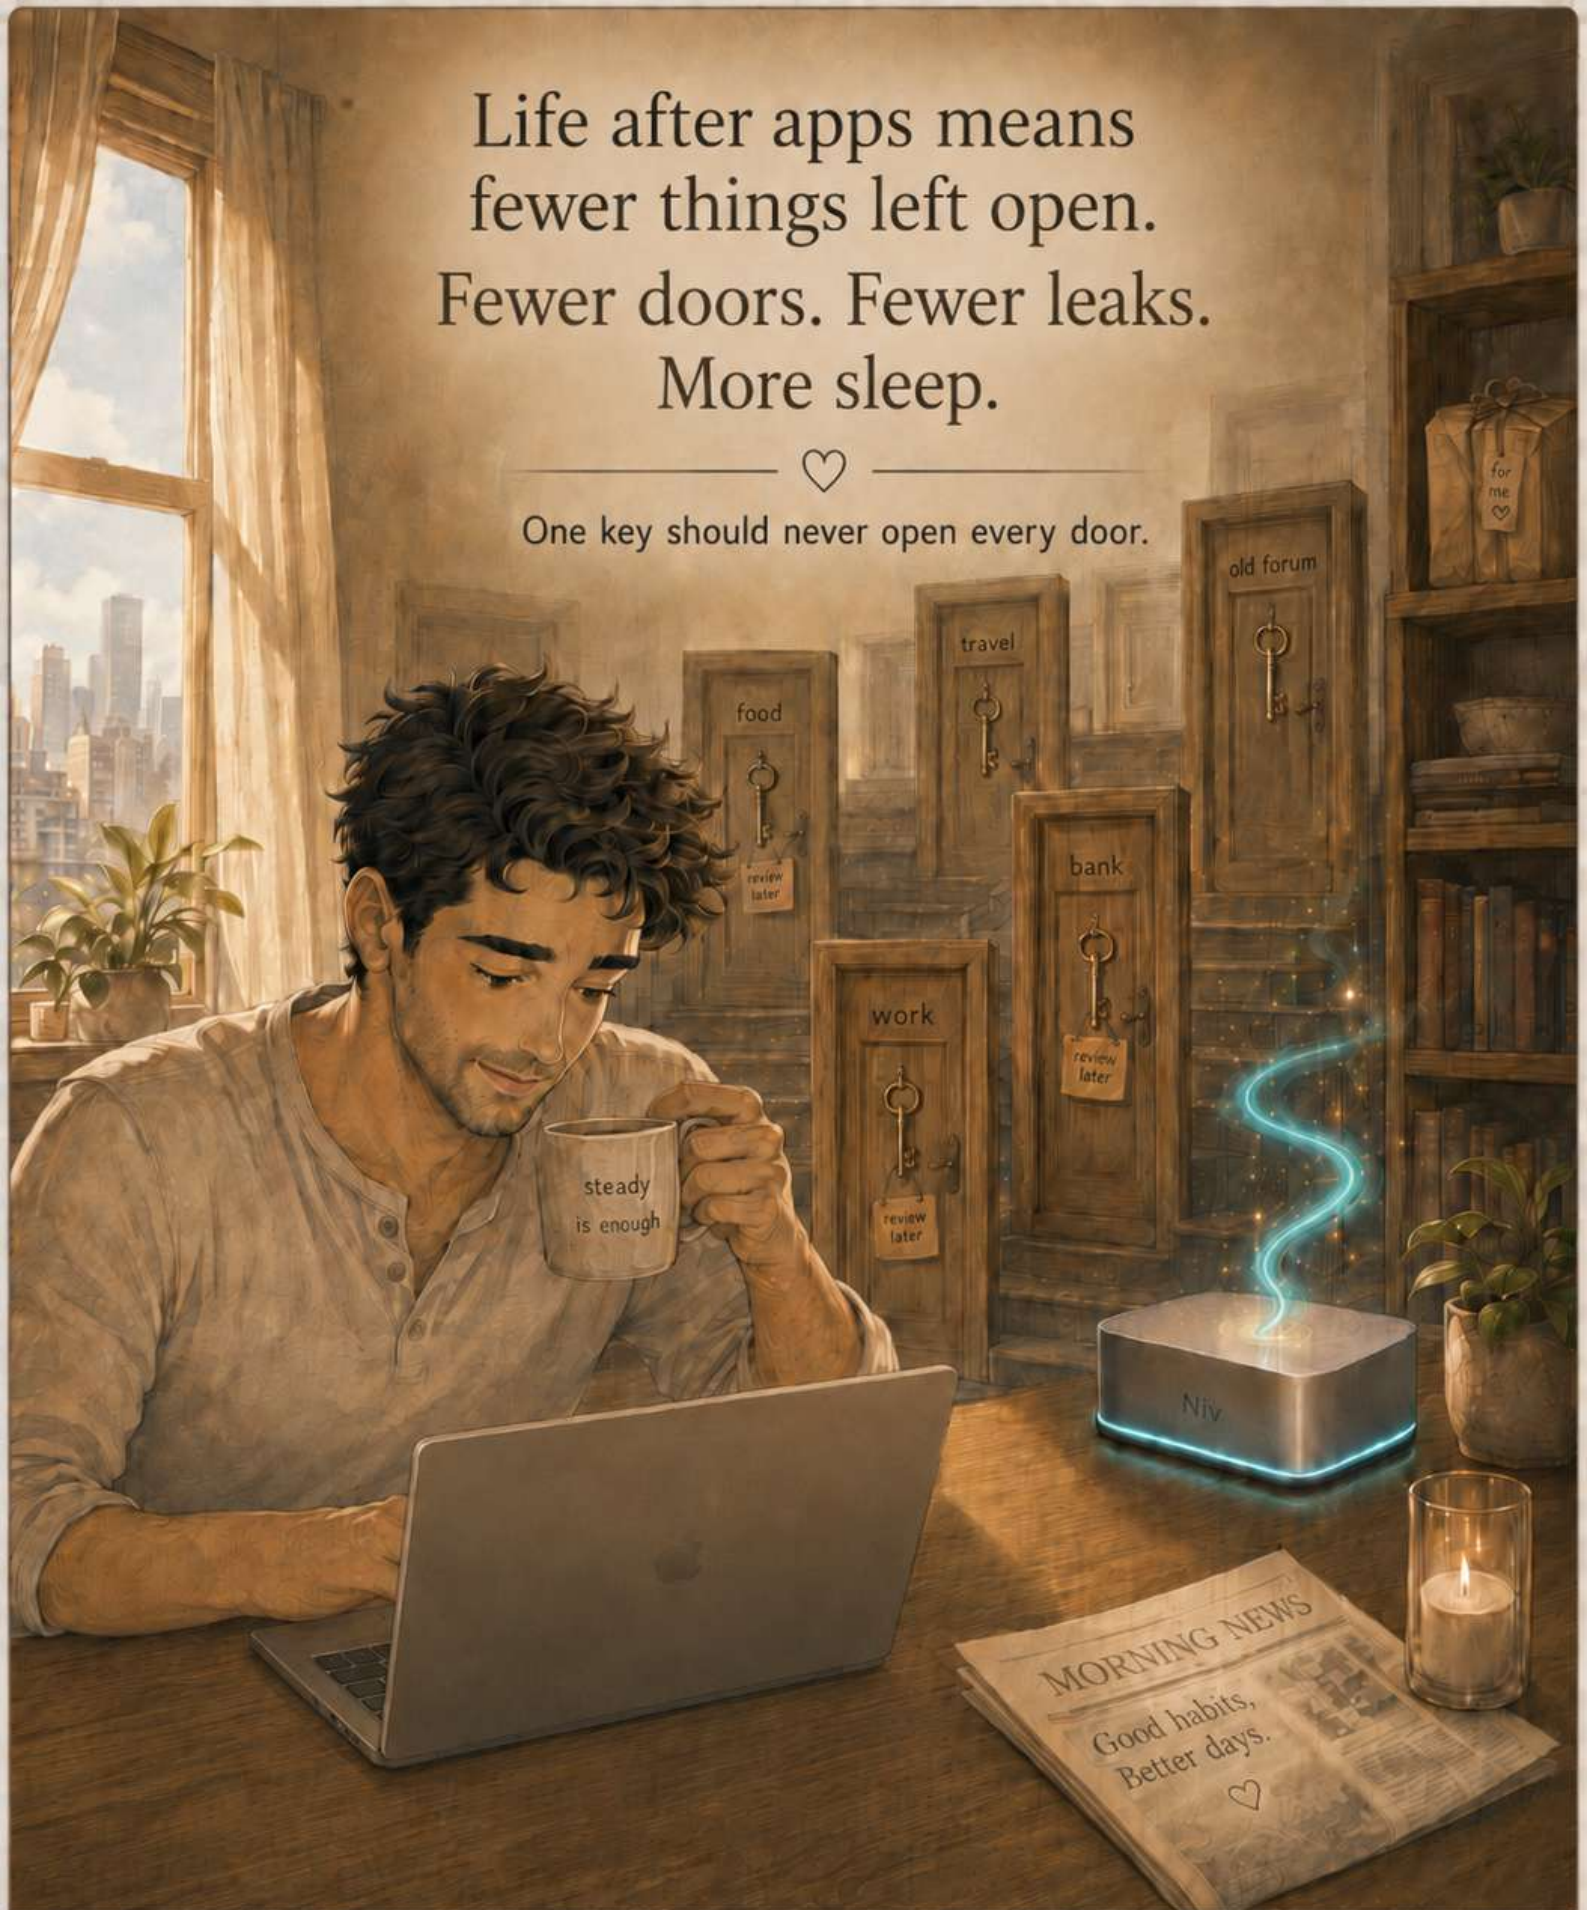

Don't make it sound noble.

I won't.

Life after apps means
Fewer doors. Fewer leaks.
More sleep.

One key should never open every door.
